Directions UPDATED – December 2017

From QUITO – General Notes

Black Sheep Inn is about 3 to 4 hours driving from Quito. It is best to leave in the morning in order to ensure great views along the way and to have enough time for photo breaks and stretching your legs. You no longer need a four wheel drive to get here, even the smallest rental cars make it. The entire driving loop is now paved.

All roads in Ecuador have been greatly improved over the last few years. Many streets, roads, and intersections are only recently being marked. Therefore these instructions will describe clear landmarks to look for as you drive. When referring to bridges in the city, these instructions ignore pedestrian walkways that go over the road. It may be helpful if someone can be your navigator, and read to you as you are driving. Please be aware that landmarks are constantly changing and sorry if some of the instructions are redundant.

WARNING: PICO Y PLACA

In order to reduce peak hour traffic congestion, Quito has implemented restricted driving hours based on the last digit of the license plate on the vehicle you are driving. This system is called "Pico y Placa" and you are not allowed to drive between the hours of 7:30-9:00 am or 4:00-7:30 pm within Quito.

Monday -	License Plates ending in 1 or 2
Tuesday -	License Plates ending in 3 or 4
Wednesday -	License Plates ending in 5 or 6
Thursday -	License Plates ending in 7 or 8
Friday -	License Plates ending in 9 or 0 (zero)

On weekends and holidays there is no Pico y Placa

If caught driving fines are HIGH. Your car is allowed to be parked within Quito during these hours, just not circulating.

From Quito – New Town – Mariscal

If you know how to head south out of the city on the Pan-American Highway, skip ahead to page 3.
You have two options from Quito:

Via 'El Trebol' → This is now the fastest route.

Continue on Orellana up a hill until you get to a traffic circle, turn right (south) on 12 de Octubre. Pass another traffic circle, but continue on 12 de Octubre past the Swiss Hotel and Radisson on the left. You will go under a bridge in the middle lane, marked with a sign Oriental. This curves under the bridge and goes to the left. Traffic will be merging in with you. Follow the main traffic flow past a large Military Hospital on your right and Rumiñahui Stadium on your left. After the Hospital stay in the right lane. The road curves right and leaves houses/apartments behind. You'll pass a Mobile Gas Station on your right.

The traffic pattern has changed at 'El Trebol'; it is now a large traffic circle combined with a clover leaf. Go until a bridge and clover leaf intersection, pass under the bridge and turn right, which loops you around to the top of the same bridge, merge and stay left following the road uphill. This is the first step out of Quito on via General Rumiñahui, also called E-35.

This is currently a 2 lane highway up and 3 lanes down, you climb up. Pass under a bridge and get in the right lane. Exit right before the next bridge. Sign says to Chillogallo. You are now climbing on the Nuevo Oriental heading south; also called Simon Bolivar. This is a Quito bypass. It goes up high on the eastern ridge above Quito. There is a pull out on the right with a great view over the Southern part of the city.

Continue on the Nuevo Oriental/Simon Bolivar heading south and follow a sign for 'Tambillo - Aloag - SUR'. This is a fast road, El Periferico/Simon Bolivar, which stays high. The Pan American Highway merges in from the right and the road expands to 4 lanes in each direction.

You are now on the way to Latacunga (see page three).

Via Interoceanica → Guayasamin Tunnel → Eastern Valley

WARNING: Traffic through the Guayasamin Tunnel is one way into Quito from 7-9:30 am; and it flows only out of Quito from 4-7:30 pm. The rest of the time traffic is in both directions.

When you come out of the tunnel there is a $0.40 toll booth. Stay in the right lane to pay the toll with cash. Take the first exit right and loop sharply around to the Nuevo Oriental heading south; also called Simon Bolivar. This is a Quito bypass and curves around behind the city. It will cross a large bridge and climbs up the other side. The 'new' Ruta Viva which goes to and from the 'new' Quito Airport in Tababela comes in from the left. After crossing another bridge over a large road (this connects to the 'El Trebol') continue straight and climb up on the Nuevo Oriental/Simon Bolivar heading south.

The Nuevo Oriental/Simon Bolivar goes up high on the eastern ridge above Quito. There is a pull out on the right with a great view over the Southern part of the city.

Continue on the Nuevo Oriental/Simon Bolivar and follow a sign for 'Tambillo - Aloag - SUR'. This is a fast road, El Periferico/Simon Bolivar, which stays high. The Pan American Highway merges in from the right and the road expands to 4 lanes each direction.

You are now on the way to Latacunga (see page three).

From the NEW Quito Airport opened in 2013 Via Ruta Viva —>

From the Airport head south to Pifo and then turn right (west) on the Interoceánica E-28 towards Tumbaco, Cumbaya and Quito. Make sure you stay on the Ruta Viva which is modern and fast (although watch your speed: 90kph).

"La Ruta Viva" now connects the new Airport with the Simon Bolivar heading either South (or North). After merging South on the Simon Bolivar you will cross a bridge over a large road (this connects to the 'El Trebol') continue straight and climb up on the Nuevo Oriental/Simon Bolivar heading south.

Continue on the Nuevo Oriental/Simon Bolivar and follow a sign for 'Tambillo - Aloag - SUR'. This is a fast road, El Periferico/Simon Bolivar, which stays high. The Pan American Highway merges in from the right and the road expands to 4 lanes each direction.

You are now on the way to Latacunga (see next page).

UPDATE 2017: The entire loop has been paved with asphalt and is in good shape and fast, although it is narrow in parts. Go slow and enjoy the fantastic views.

SOUTH OF QUITO

General Notes

You are on your way south to LATACUNGA. Black Sheep Inn is in the middle of a loop, so there are two different ways for you to get here. Both are beautiful and take about 3 to 4 hours from Quito. You can choose the Northern Route (this page) or the Southern Route (next page).

You should plan on driving in one way and out the other. This way you can complete the loop and enjoy the unique scenery in both directions. It is recommended to come in via the Northern Route and Sigchos; then when you depart you can see Laguna Quilotoa in the morning when the weather is the best and continue on the rest of the-loop.

Northern Route - through Sigchos

The Northern Route goes near Saquisilí and then through Toacazo and Sigchos to Chugchilán. This route is slightly harder to find your way. You may need to ask directions once or twice. People are very friendly, and if you ask the name of the next town, they usually point you in the correct direction. Remember that many people do not own vehicles, so they may not have an accurate sense of how long it takes to get somewhere driving. Also many people have not traveled through the back-country to locations such as Chugchilán.

After leaving Quito you'll go through Aloag. All traffic goes to the right, follow signs south to Latacunga, Ambato or Riobamba. Aloag is the turn-off for going down to Santo Domingo and the coast. Make sure you continue south to Latacunga, not west towards Santo Domingo.

Lasso is 33 kilometers south of Aloag. You will pass through Machachi and there are a few gas stations. After Café de la Vaca on the left and Pizza El Hornero on the right there is a Panavia toll booth (currently $1.00). Then you will climb over a mountain pass. If it is clear, Cotopaxi is very close on your left, the Ilinizas Twin Peaks on the right. Sometimes coming down this pass you can see the Avenue of the Volcanoes: Tungurahua (smoking), Las Altars, Sangay (also smoking, but further away) and Chimborazo to the right.

Follow the Pan American Highway down past the entrance to Cotopaxi National Park (large bridge over the highway after a long straight downhill). This is about 1+ hour south of Quito. On the right will be your last chance to buy high octane gasoline - "SUPER". Gasoline is also available near Sigchos, but only "EXTRA" - which is REGULAR unleaded gas. Continue on towards Lasso.

There's now a bypass around Lasso. Look for a small green sign on the right that says "Tanicuchi". There is also a large photo sign with of Laguna Quilotoa, an emerald crater-lake, advertising Sigchos. These signs are placed just as you are approaching a large bridge over the highway with a stop light under the bridge. The turn is on your right before you get to the bridge and stop light. (If you miss the Tanicuchi exit, take a right at the next stop light. This will bring you to the intersection with the Sigchos road. Go straight across.) Stay right after the exit and traffic circle. Turn right at the first stop light towards Toacazo and Sigchos. After a couple of speed bumps, you are now on your way to Toacazo (toe-ah-CAH-so) on a paved road.

NOTE: If it is Thursday and you want to go to Saquisilí (pronounced sock-ee-see-LEE) for the market before coming up to Chugchilán, then you will continue straight through the stop light, this takes you through Tanicuchi to Saquisilí, otherwise skip ahead to Lasso to Toacazo.

You should be on a paved road. You will pass a gray sign with white and yellow letters on your right that says "SANTUARIO DE CUICUNO" and then go down a steep hill and over a river. The village is just a few kilometers away. Lock your vehicle and have someone watch it while you wander around the extensive market squares.

When leaving Saquisilí Market return the same way and turn left at the "SANTUARIO DE CUICUNO" sign. The potholed road climbs steeply up to a beautiful old church on your left and turns right. Visit the Church if it is open and you have time. Many people have been cured of sicknesses and disease there. The road is paved, but in poor shape. In Toacazo they have changed the traffic pattern of the one square village. You must turn right one block away from the main square on a one way street, at the next block you are forced left, drive straight into the main square. Keep going straight one block past the main square and turn left. There will be a gas station on your left in about a ½ km. After merging at a stop light, you are on your way to Sigchos. You can also ask in Toacazo for the road to Sigchos (SIG-choe-z).

LASSO TO TOACAZO

If you didn't go to Saquisilí, it takes about 15 minutes to Toacazo. You will pass a few flower plantations (plastic covered greenhouses) and a hotel called La Quinta Colorada on your left. Follow the road as it curves around; don't turn at any of the intersections. At a stop light follow the bypass around Toacazo that passes the cemetery.

TOACAZO TO SIGCHOS

Sigchos is about 1 hour+ away. Toacazo to Plancha Loma is very fast now on a new road, about 10 minutes. (After Plancha Loma there is a turn off to the left to go to Isinlivi on a bad dirt road; you do NOT go to Isinlivi to get to Sigchos or Chugchilán). After Plancha Loma you climb to a high pass and the road is good almost all the way to Sigchos, watch your speed on narrow hairpin turns.

The road begins to drop into a beautiful canyon. Continue on the main road staying left at a hairpin turn at a large painted white rock. You will cross a small bridge over a nice clear stream. The next community is called Las Manzanas with a small store on the right. You will drop down into the Rio Toachi canyon and climb up the other side. About half way up you go through Yalo (yah-LOW). There is a gas station on your left; last chance to fill your gas tank. Keep going up to Sigchos.

Sigchos now has street signs and even a few stop lights! As you come into Sigchos you'll be on a road called '14 de Noviembre'. After passing the Municipio parking lot with some road equipment and paving stones, take the second left onto 'Eloy Alfaro'. Continue straight through 2 stop lights and about 6-8 intersections. The road is now unreasonably wide, newly paved and fast to Chugchilán. OR ask in Sigchos for the road to Chugchilán (choog-chee-LAHN). This road stays high above the canyon, if you're on a dirt road dropping down right away; you're on your way to Isinlivi, turn back. Black Sheep Inn is about 35 minutes from Sigchos (24 kilometers). You'll see the sign on the right. The driveway is steep, so drive it with a little bit of speed.

WELCOME!

The Southern Route - through Pujili and Zumbahua

After leaving Quito you will go through Aloag. All traffic goes to the right, follow signs to the south Latacunga, Ambato or Riobamba. Aloag is the turn-off for traffic going down to Santo Domingo and the coast. Make sure you continue south to Latacunga, not west towards Santo Domingo.

You will pass through Machachi and there are a few gas stations. After Café de la Vaca on the left and Pizza El Hornero on the right there is a Panavia toll booth (currently $1.00). Then you will climb over a mountain pass. If it is clear, Cotopaxi is very close on your left, the Ilinizas Twin Peaks on the right. Sometimes coming down this pass you can see the Avenue of the Volcanoes: Tungurahua (smoking), Las Altas, Sangay (also smoking, but further away) and Chimborazo to the right.

Lasso is 33 kilometers south of Aloag. Continue down the Pan American Highway south through Lasso to Latacunga (lah-tah-COON-gah), about 20 minutes. Just past a military installation there is a bypass around Latacunga and Salcedo. This is a short cut to Pujili and the turn-off for the Southern Route.

You will pass the NEW Quito Prison on the left (at the Latacunga/Saquisilí turn off). This road is a 3 and 4 lane highway around Latacunga, although there will be 2 stop lights almost immediately. Look for an exit for Pujili, Zumbahua, La Mana, Quevedo etc. Stay right after exiting. You are now on the Latacunga - Quevedo road. At the next traffic circle stay right on the bypass around Pujili. You will come to another small traffic circle; take a right and climb on the road to Zumbahua.

If coming from the South of Ecuador

From Baños, Ambato, Riobamba, Chimborazo or even Cuenca

When heading north on the Pan American, there is now a bypass that starts between Ambato and Salcedo and easily gets you to the Pujili traffic circle without ever seeing Latacunga.

Look for a sign to Pujili, Zumbahua, La Mana, Quevedo etc. Exit on the right and drive around the traffic circle (above the highway) to head west towards Pujili. Just after the turn off on the right for La Victoria, cross a bridge and at the traffic circle, turn right on the Pujili by-pass. When you come to another mini traffic circle turn right. The road you are on has been completely rebuilt all the way to Zumbahua and beyond.

The climb from Pujili goes up and up and up on a winding good road. Now you are heading towards Zumbahua (zoom-BAH-wah) about 45 minutes from Pujili (60 kilometers). Tigua is about 10 km before Zumbahua and they have a small gallery on the right featuring Naif Paintings. More paintings are available at Laguna Quilotoa.

At the turn off into Zumbahua there are some small stands selling drinks and food on the right. The turn off to Zumbahua, Quilotoa and Chugchilán is just after these stands on the right. If you pass a gas station, you have gone too far and you are on your way to Quevedo, turn back. You can fill your gas tank, if you haven't already. The entrance road to Zumbahua is paved. Continue through the village with the main square on the right, going down and crossing a bridge over a river.

ZUMBAHUA TO QUILOTOA (key-low-TOE-ah)

is 14 kilometers (about 20 minutes driving). After a few kilometers along the paved road, you cross another stream and pass through a small community. The road follows along the canyon's edge, turn right at the fork and then over another bridge. There is a painted sign for Quilotoa at this junction. Follow the paved road. The road climbs gradually to Quilopungo, a small school and walled in playground.

Continue past the Ponce turnoff and a sign for Shalala on the right, pass a sign for Nino Rumi and up to an archway indicating the entrance to Quilotoa on the right and the road to Chugchilán (choog-chee-LAHN) to the left. It is worth stopping to see Laguna Quilotoa on the way in, even if only for a few photos. Chugchilán is about 30 minutes away.

MAJOR ROAD WORK has been done on the road from Quilotoa to Chugchilán. It used to be the worst part of the road and the total distance was 22 kilometers. The finished road is now only 16 km and paved. Mountains were literally torn down, curves filled in and valleys bridged... Go slow through the 'Canyon of Cement'. Watch out for repairs and wash-outs. The road arrives all the way to Chugchilán. It used to take an hour from Quilotoa to Chugchilán, now it is under a half hour.

Black Sheep Inn is about a ½ kilometer down the road past the village of Chugchilán (a small plaza with a church and some buildings). The driveway and sign will be on your left. The driveway is steep so drive it with a little bit of speed.

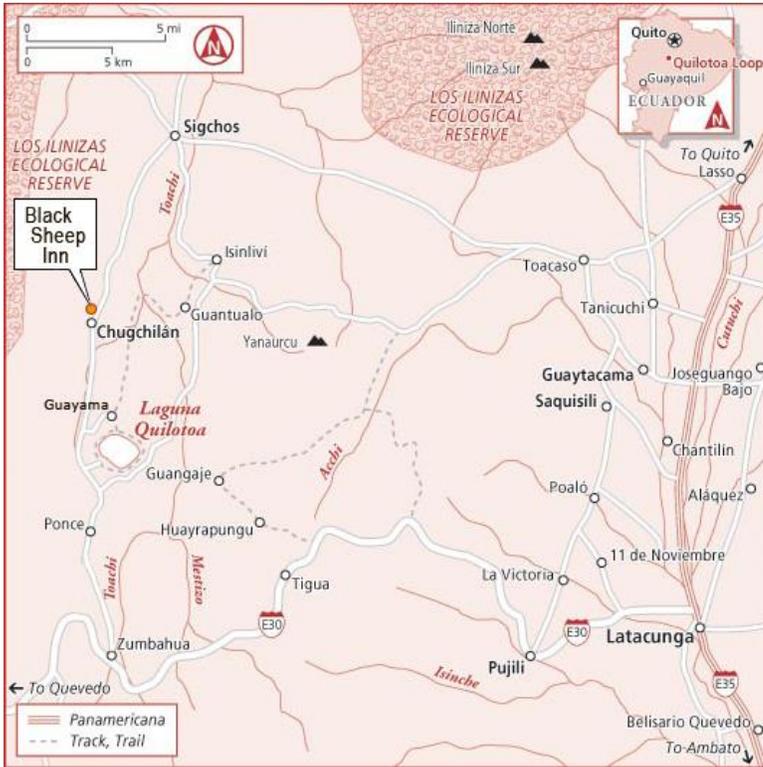

Welcome!
